A project has been started in Paris for raising a sum of $210,000, in 1890, for sending an expedition to the North Pole. It is proposed to send this expedition a mercantile character in some respects, so as to afford to shareholders a chance of not losing their money, but its chief object is to be scientific.
A party of seven men, women and children, while crossing the Mississippi river on the ice, about four miles above Muscatine, all broke through and barely escaped, after being in the water for some time. Mr. BUTMAN escaped by catching hold of the tail of a Newfoundland dog, which swam to him, and dog dragging him out.
A young girl named FANNIE CORNELL, who lives as a domestic in the family of RICHARD GORRELL, in Louisville, Ky., had a habit of attempting to commit suicide every time her mistress reprimands her. She has tried hanging in the garret and leaping from the kitchen, but thus far her efforts have proved unsuccessful.
An imperial Austrian edict has gone forth regarding the whiskers of officers of that army. They may be allowed to wear the whiskers long, in imitation of the emperor.
Forty-five cities have in the present year, but they are not to wear them of a length much shorter in fashion, so as to hide the insignia of rank and the decorations.
The government sold during the past year, $12,204,769 worth of postage stamps and envelopes. We sent abroad, 4,886,916 letters, and received from abroad 4,548,680. We sent nearly 8,000,000 of newspapers, and received a little over 1,000,000. The number of postoffices is 35,258, of which there has been an increase in the United States, 2778. Forty-five cities have in the present year, but they are not to wear them of a length much shorter in fashion, so as to hide the insignia of rank and the decorations.
Nine of the largest diamonds ever seen in this country are now on view at Knap's "diamond parlor," New York. They are attached to a string of sixty-nine rare pearls, the most forming a necklace and brooch which, for value and beauty of the stones, are unequaled by any but the court jewels. It has taken five years to make this collection of massive brilliants, and the price of the trifling bauble is only sixty thousand dollars—a larger sum, we believe, than was put on any single piece of jewelry yet manufactured in America.
The New Orleans Picayune, of the 9th, says: "The crosswise at Grand Lake is now about a half mile wide, with the water pouring through with great rapidity. The current of the main river is diverted more or less the entire width of the river. Steamers passing down the river, when nearing the break, are obliged to head well over to the port side to avoid being drawn into it. The river below has fallen over a foot since this break occurred. It is contended that the break in the Grand Lake will save all of our country below from being inundated."
Some time ago the Secretary of the Treasury received intelligence of the seizure, at Belfast, Me., of a large quantity of goods that had been smuggled into the United States from Canada, and which are valued at thirty thousand dollars. The merchandise was packed in fish barrels, and represented by the shippers to be fish. The goods were a miscellaneous assortment of cloths, silks, satins, lace and other articles of dress character, which had high duties are imposed. Several prominent merchants in Canada, in high standing, are said to be implicated in this smuggling transaction.
The London Bookeller publishes an article on "The Literature of Vice"—the penny and half-penny romances of murder, robbery, seduction and adultery—in which we find some curious details. Thus we read: "As to the rate of remuneration received by the writers of these stories, we understand that two guineas for a sheet of eight pages is considered good payment, while in some few cases men are to be found who can provide enough writing to fill eight pages of close print, each number warranted to contain at least one murder, fire, shipwreck or seduction, for fifteen shillings! On the other hand, two or three of the writers of these sensation stories are likewise their proprietors; and considerable sums are said to have been yearly netted for their sale in penny numbers."
The portrait of Queen VICTORIA, to be presented to Mr. PALMER, has just been finished in London. It is painted in enamel, and is an oval miniature, fourteen inches by ten. The enamel is on a stout gold plate, and represents the Queen seated, half-length, the arms and hands thrown out admirably from the black dress. Her Majesty wears the blue ribbon of the Garter and the George; she is represented in a MARY STUART cap, surrounded by a coronet, and her black dress is relieved by a trimming of ermine. It is a good likeness of the Queen, and very handsomely framed in deep maroon velvet, lacquered with fine ornate. Above the portrait are the royal arms, each side the rose, thistle, and shamrock, and beneath the inscription, which was given by the Queen herself: "Presented by the Queen to GEORGE PALMER, Esq., the Benefactor of the Poor of London."

CHARLESTON.

THURSDAY MORNING, APRIL 4, 1887.

AGITATION.

If there is one thing which is repulsive to our people just now it is political agitation. We have gone through so exhausting a struggle that we have scarcely the energy for further contest. We have been so disappointed in our hopes that we have lost all faith in advice from any quarter. Our individual embarrassments are pressing that we have neither the time nor the temper to think of public interests, and are tempted in utter despair to confine ourselves to the hard work of making our daily bread and leaving to Providence to accomplish results which we cannot anticipate.

But the issue which is upon us is one which will not let us alone. Not only is there no safety in passive submission but there is no rest for us until that issue is settled. We are not permitted simply to suffer, we are forced to do. What is our condition? A whole population has been made voters and to them we are compelled in a few months to submit the complete revolution of our political society. This privilege of voting is to them the consummation of their freedom—there is not one who does not regard its exercise as the final and triumphant proof that he has been a free man. It is the power by which he has been governed and he looks to it as the power by which his further wants are to be supplied. The more ignorant the voter the more important will be attached to the privilege which is to guarantee his full equality with the white man. Every colored citizen of this State will vote, in him there is no apathy to overcome, no despair to counteract, no need of party contrivance to stimulate. He is all hope and energy and activity. He has interests which he does not fully comprehend and prejudices which it is not easy to overcome, and to-day, and from to-day on to the end, there are and will be, busy, indefatigable, unscrupulous men actually at work to misrepresent these interests, excite and misdirect these prejudices.

There is not an intelligent man in the State, white or black, who does not know that the white people of the State cannot be put in a condition of political inferiority without infinite disturbance and terrible danger. There is not one white or black who does not know that such a condition, if ever reached, would not last, and would cure itself at the price of destruction to the black race, but there is not one who does not know that the only way to a consummation is the earnest union of the white vote with the intelligent and respectable colored vote.

How is this union to be brought about? It matters not a straw whether men call themselves Democrats or Conservatives, or National or Union Republicans; all men can work together now who honestly desire to secure the adoption of a sound and healthy State constitution, who wish to lay the foundations wisely of that local legislation which is to determine our taxation, encourage education, govern the relations of daily life—in a word, protect life, liberty and property. When we have restored the State, there will be time enough to decide what the policies of the State should be. Let all those who desire this earnestly go to work faithfully, and before very long they will find themselves working together.

It is not our purpose, perhaps it is not our duty, to give advice to the colored voters. As yet they have not given us the opportunity, but we can speak to the white voters of this city. It is perfectly clear that, with the numerical majority of the colored vote, if it acts in combined antagonism to you, it defeats you. That vote can be driven into antagonism by injudicious opposition, or by continued neglect. At present there is every reason to believe that the better class of the colored voters do not desire an unnecessary hostility. They know, as General SICKLES so judiciously advised them, that their interests are identical with ours, that if they possess some, we possess others of those elements, the combination of which is necessary to their prosperity, and that the worst advisers they can have are those who would sow the seeds of animosity between the races.

Why not then at once proceed to the practical work of effecting that union as far as lies in our power? Let us do that work not in the spirit of buying and selling, which the Northern press seems to consider the only motive power of political action, but with the open and resolute determination to do justice to all classes of our citizens; with the manly avowal that however we may regret the change, we intend to use it, if possible, for the advantage and prosperity of the whole State, and with the fixed purpose to preserve, as we are bound to do, in the interest of every man, white or black, in this State, that influence which belongs to brains, character and property. Better for us to do this boldly and promptly than to allow malignant and passionate men to appeal to selfishness, ignorance, and prejudice in the manner indicated in the following editorial from the Herald:

But our point in this case is the negro vote of the South. It is a Southern political balance of power; it covers the popular majority in South Carolina, the importance of which to the ruling white class is thoroughly grasped by Hampton. Like a wise man he accepts the issue of the war, thus home to the terms of Congress. He has appealed to the blacks, lately his slaves, as his political avengers, to try the political experiment of harmony, placing with him the white man before they have overtaken the political service of strangers. There is in this appeal a degree of chivalry and political sagacity far higher than anything else in the line of chivalry of which South Carolina can justly boast. The honest fact that the two races in the South must henceforth harmonize on a political basis, and a bloody conflict of races is the ground covered by Wade Hampton. But the Northern Radicals, and even the old Northern Bourbon Democrats, are in the field for this Southern negro balance of power. What, then, is most likely to follow from this rivalry for the smiles of Samba?

Black though it may be, we have to look this thing in the face. You cannot give "the Southern colored gentleman" the ballot and still expect to keep him out of the office. There he has the majority in the matter of color he must be bought off, or the white man must stand back when the time comes. The logical programme from negro suffrage in the South must be carried out by the Republicans in the North, or the party will be broken to pieces. Thus there is a fair prospect that the Medical Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, his Southern platform, will yet be more than a match for the Radicals of Massachusetts.

THE BANQUET OF THE BOARD OF TRADE.
This banquet was a brilliant success, and from the character of its proceedings, is entitled to be regarded as a matter of political significance. The presence of the higher authorities, both of the State and of the United States, and their frank expression of opinion, gives to the speeches made on this occasion more than ordinary importance.

with the civil authorities of the State, and to administer the functions of his command in the interest and for the welfare of our people.
The speech of the Governor was a decided political pronouncement. It was a full and manly expression of his opinions on the present condition of the country, and was marked by that able and practical mode of looking at facts which is characteristic of his style. It is well that the new order of things should be so distinctly recognized by one who acted so distinguished and influential a part in the old. We are glad to see that his excellency so thoroughly comprehends the public sentiment of the State, and has so well expressed opinions which needed only the endorsement of some man of great public position to give them authority. Especially are we pleased, that if it has to be done, one who has so long stood in close and affectionate relation to the Democratic party, has given them notice of the dissolution of that old political partnership, the assets of which are now fairly returned "Nulla Bona."

Not should we omit to state, that among the pleasantest incidents of the evening, was the speech of our distinguished Senator. It was grateful to the purest sensibilities to hear him, turning from the perplexities of politics and the common place of commercial congratulations, expatiate with taste and feeling upon the excellencies of that "charity" which covers a multitude of sins.
